Photo Courtesy of Griffin Claw Brewing Co.Responding to the CO2 shortage used to carbonate beverages, Griffin Claw Brewing Co., a microbrewery located in Birmingham's Railway District, has teamed up with Earth Laboratories to take advantage of new technology that records carbon waste from its business. Earthly Labs technology allows breweries to supplement co2 supply by capturing and using their own natural CO2, which has fewer hydrocarbons and other impurities. to mark the new technology, Griffin Claw states that he will release a special beer beer recaptured CO2. will soon be available in its Birmingham and Rochester Hills taprooms. Griffin Claw is the first craft brewery in Michigan to buy Earthly Labs carbon capture technology to reduce CO2 emissions. The Brewers' Association has forecast CO2 shortages of up to 30% due to a decline in ethanol production as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. Earth Laboratories, based in Austin, Texas, said co2 shortages have led to delays in deliveries and price spikes. Earthly Labs plug-and-play carbon capture technology, called CiCi, allows craft breweries like Griffin Claw to capture 100,000 pounds of CO2 waste or more from the brewing process each year and reuse it to carbonate and pack beer. Earth Labs technology reduces the risk of our supply chain and reduces our emissions footprint, says Pat Craddock, CFO of Griffin Claw. As a result, we reduce costs, make better beer and invest in clean air. It's not a brainer. To learn more about the technology, breweries can sign up for a webinar hosted by the Brewers Association on Dec. 17 that contains ground laboratories that cook customers. In addition, its spirits are available at their two taproom locations. Griffin Claw is owned by Bonnie LePage and Mary Nicholson. Their husbands and families are the same management team behind Big Rock Chophouse and the Reserve, both in Birmingham, East Side Mario's in Livonia and Rochester Hills, and Clubhouse BFD in Rochester Hills. With simply one of the best (if not the best) selection of beers in the state, Clubhouse BFD is a shrine to craft beer and proof that microbreweries are well established in Detroit. While more than 180 beers from across the country are on offer, Michigan-based beer is the focus here, including options from Perrin Brewing Co. and Jolly Pumpkin Artisan Ales. The club also takes its food pairing seriously, serving umami-laden snacks like a Nifty's Choice burger topped with aged cheddar, thickly cut bacon, BFD sauce and an onion ring.
